Valentine Rose

Swathe yourself in delicate and romantic rosy scents and shades...

Looking Good

Bathing Belle

"Ancient Greeks and Romans used roses to fragrance their baths," says Harley Street skin guru Lee Garrett (@garrett.l). "We all love beautiful things: a single rose melts any heart! Roses are a key ingredient in many organic beauty products and are prized in aromatherapy for their pleasant, therapeutic properties."

Barely There

"Make-up can make skin appear older if applied with a heavy hand," warns Lisa Tynnan, owner of Bakan cosmetics, com. "Apply a light layer of moisturiser with a flat buffing brush. Stipple on dewy finish liquid foundation. Apply liquid concealer and finish with fine milled powder."

Scent-sational Skin

"Beauty products today are embracing rose extracts: they suit all skin types, including dry, sensitive and especially mature skin," says Lee Garrett. "The extracts contain a complex array of vitamins, minerals, antioxidant and emollient properties. Rose extracts have healing benefits and can also help target redness and inflammation of the skin."

Glamour-Eyes

"Choose matte or silk shadow. Blend upwards. Avoid very frosty products which emphasise fine lines," advises Sunandya, com expert Ash Waterman. Clarins Ombre Indescent cream-to-powder shadows in Silver Pink and Silver Plum give a sophisticated pearlescent shimmer. Follow with mascara.
